The games on Satureay did not show much to the casual observer, but were all important to the coaches as indicating points of weakness that must be bolstered up or signs of strength that must be made the most of. The Yale game was an exception perhaps. Either Syracuse, under the coaching of Howard Jones, a Yale end last year, is remarkably strong, or else Yale is weaker than the make-up of the team would lead one to believe. The first theory looks more tenable. Captain Horr, of Syracuse, is a tower of strength in himself, and he has gathered a team about him that knows football and how it should be played.

while Princeton had to do little more Pennsylvania showed latent strength against the good defense of Bucknell. while Princeton had to do little more than go through the motions to beat the Springfield Training School, and used two or three men in each position for purely educational purposes.

Cornell may have been lucky to find comparatively weak foe in Hamilton as the team has not settled down, and played a loose, ragged game.

CADETS ARE SCARCE. LONDON, Oct. 5.- War Secretary

Haldane is much alarmed at the great decrease in the number of military cadets who offer themselves at Woolwich and Sandhurst for examination, and he is now engaged in considering a scheme for improving the pay of subalterns in the army.

HAINS' FRIENDS GONE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.-Three officers stationed at Fort Hamilton, intimates of Capt. Peter C. Hains, one of whom occupied half of the Hains quarters on the reservation, have been transferred outside the jurisdiction of the courts of New York by order of the the big football games this year, but it is not too early to advance the opinion that the season now fairly under way, will be one of the most interesting in the history of the sport.

The revised rules, which have improved the game to such a marked degree, have been tried out for two years, and their application now amounts to something more than experiments. The forward pass, under a further revision last fall, is still subject to development, while advanced ideas in the use and variation of the on-side kick can also be looked for, but on the whole the game has settled down, and the various elevens can be developed quicker along approved lines than was possible last year or the year before.

Abundance of Material.

Further than that, the more important colleges are not lacking in good material, which indicates evenly balanced teams and consequently close and hard fought struggles. This is particularly true at Yale, Princeton, Pennsylvania, and Annapolis. Harvard, Cornell, and West Point have more to do, perhaps, but indications even at this early date point to strong elevens if the material TAILORING.
